

If the NAB was so upset about this, then they should have been proactive and made radio much more enjoyable. Before I got XM in the car I would have to listen to endless commercials during rush hour and maybe hear four songs in a half hour.

With XM in the car I can enjoy listening to what I want with out all of nonsense. As for local programing we live in a free market country and if they can't compete then they should go away. It's not the goverments job to make sure they can keep thier end up. Since I pay for the service of XM satellite radio, I think I should have more to say on what they program then people that are afraid of looseing market share. I want my XM and I want my traffic and weather reports on my XM subscription.

Maybe next time the NAB will be more worried about the listeners of radio then the advertisers because with out listeners their wont be any advertising

Thank you
